Branford College Tea with Author Ari Satok

Thursday, November 1, 2018 - 4:00pm to 5:30pm
New Haven, CT

The OISS is thrilled to be co-sponsoring the next Branford College Tea on November 1st. In this talk, author Ari Satok will tell the story of his experiences traveling to international schools on four different continents (all part of the United World College movement), in countries including Swaziland, Hong Kong, Germany, the United States, and a variety of others, on a mission to capture the stories of young people from all around the world. He’ll read from his book, The Architects of Hope, that captures the narratives of 16 different students that he interviewed as part of his journey, and talk about the lessons he learned from these inspirational young people from countries as varied as Syria and Nepal, Brazil and Guatemala. He’ll share photos from his travels, audio clips from his interviews, and insights on his experiences and his process. He’ll end by facilitating an activity through which students will get the opportunity to share parts of their own narratives with each other. Bio: Ari Satok graduated from Princeton University in 2014 and is an author and educator who believes in the power of stories to make the world a better place. He loves sharing his experiences with young people and always enjoys learning from them in return.

Source URL: https://oiss.yale.edu/calendar/events/branford-college-tea-with-author-ari-satok