March Madness 101: OISS Tournament with Prizes!

Wednesday, March 17, 2021 - 7:00pm to 8:00pm
   New Haven , CT

What the heck is March Madness [1] and why is everyone talking about it? Not to worry – OISS is here to explain!

March Madness is a single-elimination basketball tournament for Division 1 Men's College Basketball, and is easily one of the most exciting annual sporting events in the U.S. Due to COVID-19, last year’s tournament was cancelled so there is even more anticipation for this year’s return of March Madness!

On March 17th, join OISS staff members Luca and Molly to learn more about the basketball tournament and make your very own March Madness Bracket [2] to compete for bragging rights and Yale swag. We will walk you through the bracket scoring system that we have chosen so you can track your progress during the games, and keep up with the conversation with your U.S. classmates and co-workers!

Even if you aren’t that interested in sports, participating in a March Madness Bracket tournament is a great way to meet a new group of people and engage with the sport in a fun and different way.

During the final four games on Saturday, April 3rd, we will also watch a live stream of one of the games together and chat together over Zoom to share in the excitement. Further details available once you register.

After the final game on April 5th, we will announce the bracket champion and runner-up and they will receive some Yale swag valued at $75 and $50!

We look forward to seeing you there!

Note: The series is open to the Yale Community. Please RSVP in order to attend and receive the Zoom instructions.
