Uma's Afternoon at the Peabody: Exploring Yellowstone's Animal Migrations

Friday, February 23, 2018 - 3:30pm to 5:00pm
New Haven, CT

Join OISS staff member, Uma Shankar, for an afternoon at the Peabody Museum! This guided tour will lead you through one of the Peabody's fantastic temporary exhibits entitled, Invisible Boundaries: Exploring Yellowstone's Great Animal Migrations. Invisible Boundaries is a groundbreaking, interdisciplinary exhibition that combines art and science to explore the meaning of wildlife migrations to the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem. Yale scientists have collaborated for several years to develop the project, focusing on the migrations of elk and other wildlife as well as their interconnections with the ecosystems and communities in and around Yellowstone, the world's first National Park. Objects from Yale's collections augment the original exhibition—developed by the Buffalo Bill Center of the West and including a 3D map illustrating Yellowstone's great migrations, intimate large scale photographs by Joe Riis, and over twenty paintings by James Prosek.
