You are likely familiar with the viral #MeToo movement that has been calling attention to widespread prevalence of sexual harassment and assault, especially against women in the workplace. #MeToo and #TimesUp have reignited a century’s long conversation about women’s rights, equal pay, harassment, and the policies and laws that surround these issues. Join us for our next Understanding America discussion as we look at the history of Title IX, what #MeToo means for campus culture, and the resources that are available at Yale. To lead this conversation, we are very pleased to have three Yale colleagues join us for this discussion: Melanie Boyd, Yale College Assistant Dean of Student Affairs, Director of the Office of Gender & Campus Culture, and a Lecturer of Women’s Gender & Sexuality Studies; Maria Gutierrez, Program Manager, Title IX; and Ksenia Sidorenko, Postgraduate Associate in Psychiatry and with Yale College in Title IX Coordinator. We want to provide you with a comfortable space to engage in discussion, offer opinions, and gain insights, so please come ready to participate and ask questions. We hope to see you there. Note: Not suitable for children under the age of 15. The series is open to the Yale Community and we ask that you RSVP in order to attend.

Source URL: https://oiss.yale.edu/calendar/events/understanding-america-campus-culture-in-the-metoo-era