

Rosie

Vanakam! Meet Rosie, pursuing her Masters degree from the School of Environment @environmentyale ! An Amazing cook, hiker and snorkeler, Rosie never says no to creating best memories!

"I started up studying environmental science and policy but ended up as a humanity student in environmental anthropology in YSE. I grew up in a market town close to one of the most gigantic environmental management projects that dislocated millions, the Three Gorges Dam, and kept haunted by the entangled and distorted relations between humans and nature since young. A Foucauldian at heart, I am fascinated by the city, a place where society and nature, representation and being inseparable and integral to each other. This summer, I am doing my field research in Lower Manhattan Chinatown and trying to understand the contradictions, tensions, and conflicts that might form and shift the identity of Chinese in a community anchored by wet markets." #yale #oiss #humansofoiss
