Celebrating Indigenous Peoples' Month

November 9, 2022

Yale continues to celebrate Indigenous Peoples' Month in November and this is an opportunity to honor the native peoples of the Americas and to reflect on their rich and continuing cultural heritage.

Several events are scheduled this year to mark Indigenous Peoples' Month. November events include Indigenous Fall Feast, a Creative Writing Workshop, and Underground Indigenous Arts Night. You can find more details as they are added on the Native American Cultural Center’s calendar of upcoming events [1] and on the NAAC Instagram account at @YaleNatives [2].

We encourage you to celebrate and reflect this month, and to recognize the vibrant history, diverse cultures, and meaningful contributions of the indigenous peoples of our community and our country. We especially honor the Mohegan, Mashantucket Pequot, Eastern Pequot, Schaghticoke, Golden Hill Paugussett, Niantic, and the Quinnipiac nations and other Algonquian-speaking peoples for stewarding through generations the lands and waterways of what is now the state of Connecticut.

Source URL: https://oiss.yale.edu/news/celebrating-indigenous-peoples-month

Links
[1] https://yaleconnect.yale.edu/events_list