The trial of Derek Chauvin for George Floyd's death marks a deeply difficult moment for our country, following a year that has tested our communities in unprecedented ways. In such challenging times, Yale students, faculty, and staff, as members of a community committed to improving the world, can look to each other for support and for ways to teach and learn together.

The links on the Belonging at Yale page offer connection to university resources, health and well-being, community events, and wide-ranging scholarship on issues of racism, policing, equity, and justice. The page will be updated as needed; please email belonging@yale.edu to submit additional resources for inclusion here.

Read President Salovey's message to the Yale community on the April 20 verdict

Source URL: https://oiss.yale.edu/news/community-resources-support-following-the-trial-of-george-floyds-murder

Links:
[1] https://belong.yale.edu/community-resources-support-following-trial-derek-chauvin
[2] mailto:belonging@yale.edu